The Pennsylvania Central Railroad Co. LETTER PROM JOHN HULME.

To the Stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company:-The circumstances atbending the recent election of Directors of year Company induces me to make a short statement of the facts as far as I was concerned. I have been a Director of your Company for about ten years, elected originally without any selicitation on my part, and continuously year after year without any question of my Stness for the office. During that period I have discharged my duties to the best of my

On Saturday last, I was informed, for the arst time, that there would be an opposition to my election. On the day of the election it appeared that a well-arranged and closely conserted scheme had been made to defeat me. Two tickets were printed—my name on one, and another name substituted for mine on the other, which was similar in paper, type, and general appearance. A person was employed so stand at the front door of the building and distribute the ticket opposed to me.

How and by whom this was done it is not my purpose to state. One thing is certain, that many persons were misled and deceived into voting against me, who supposed they were voting for me, and many others did not vete who would have done so if they had known there was to be an opposition to my election. My name was the only one omitted from the ticket of all those who constituted the old Board.

I refer to the records of the Company as the evidence of my fidelity to its interests. I am a large stockholder, and represent other large steckholders, and I am confident that no just man can charge me with any remissness in the discharge of my duties. Any one familiar with the facts can but infer that my defeat has been the result of a scheme secretly and carefally pre-arranged by persons who must have had purposes of their own to serve, or by those whose objections were not based upon the real interests of the Company.

It is for you to determine whether your interests have been subserved by this change. I should not have objected to a fair and open contest, but I submit it for your consideration whether the course pursued has been such as should meet your approval. Whether in or out of the Board, I shall preserve my independence of thought and action in regard to the management of the road, and shall do what I consider necessary for the protection of my interests, in common with those of the other stockholders.

From the fact that less than one-fourth of the stock was voted, with the above result, the necessity of stockholders attending at all elections, and never assuming that there will be no opposition, is evident. John Hulms.

LETTER FROM PITTSBURG.

THE MURIER OF ROBERT DINSMORE IN WASHING-INGTON COUNTY-THE TRIAL-VERDICT OF THE Spay, Erc.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE EVENING TELEGRAPH.] Peressure, March 5 .- This section of the State has been considerably interested for the past ten days over the trials of Robert Pogler and William Montgomery, for the murder of Mr. Robert Dinsmore, a citizen of Washington county, some twenty-six miles from Pittsburg. The prominence of the family of one of the parties accused of the murder, and the high estimation in which the murdered man was held by the community, have added much to the feeling manifested on the part of the community at large, and made the case one of unusual importance. The circumstances of

THE MURDER are as follows:-On the evening of the 4th of December last, Fogler, in company with Montgomery, proceeded to the residence of the victim, armed to the teeth, and with blackened faces. The house was situated in a lonely spot, some five miles from the town of Washington, and no neighbor was within calling distance. The murderers waited until the peaceful family had gone through their evening devotions, and retired to bed, and then with stealthy tread, intent upon the consummation of their bloody deed, they took their stations near the house, and waited until all had become quiet within. No sound, save their own whispered conversation, broke the stillness of the night; the victim, wrapt in peaceful slumber, rests upon his couch within a few feet of them. The longer the work is delayed the more irksome it becomes. A consultation is held, and it is decided to at once proceed to the bloody work. The window is open, but they decide upon having their victim alone, and accordingly, with a bold knock at the door, they demand admittance. Mr. Dinsmore, fearing some ill has befallen his neighbor, but cautioned to be careful by his wife, springs out of bed, and asks, "Who's there ?" To his query is returned the answer that "A neighbor is sick, and I want to come in." Mr. Dinsmore stands with the door ajar, and in a moment both men push past him and enter the room. There is no light save that which glimmers and flickers in the grate, but yet enough for Mr. Dinsmore to see that both the men have blackened faces, In a moment the suspicion that they are robbers crosses his mind, but before he has time to act a loaded pistol is pointed at his head. with the demand, "Your money or your life !12

The situation was one which would cause the stoutest heart to quake, and the victim feeling that there was but one resource left him, that of overpowering the villains, seized with one hand the pistol of his assailant, and with the other grasped his neck. The suddenness of the attack, and the strength of Mr. Dinsmore, wrenched the pistol from the villain's hand, and he bid fair to conquer, when the other party struck the victim a heavy blow with a chair, which staggered him, and made him quit his hold, but still he held the pistol in his hand.

By this time the family of Mr. Dinsmore was aroused. His wife stood terror-stricken at the bottom of the stairs, while the rest of the family, none of whom were grown up, except two girls, stood trembling and crying behind her. No sooner did the first villain, which it has since transpired was Fogler, discover that he was loose, than he again grappled with the sturdy farmer, who, bewildered by the force of the blow from the chair, stood ianctive in the middle of the room, at the same time crying to his companion, "The knite! Why don't you use the knife?"

In the scuffle which now ensued Fogler again got possession of the pistol, while the ether rushed, knife in hand, upon the defenseless man. Now with mighty effort they wrestle. The victim grasps the keen blade in his hand, but it is wrenched from his grasp, and they separate. In a moment the report of a pistol goes echoing through the house, quickly followed by another. The fleed is

The reports of the pistol awakened all to a true sense of the transpiring circumstances. Mr. Dinsmore staggers into the hall and falls saying, "I am shot! Oh! why should this be I have injured no man." The villains, becoming alarmed, flee from the house, leaving distracted family alone with the dying father.

The fray occupied less time than it has taken me to write it, but the deed was, nevertheless, effectually done. Mr. Dinsmore. who had fainted, recovered in a few minutes, and rising, staggered to a trundle bed in the room, where he fell down, exhausted from the loss of blood, and expressing the greatest wonderment that any man should have so much spite against him as to endeavor to take his life. Soon after he again fainted; and it was not until then that the family became acquainted with the serious hurts he had received in the melée. The children were sent out to alarm the neighbors and procure assistance; but before the arrival of anybody the unfortunate man had ceased to breathe.

THE DAY AFTER THE MURDER. The day following the murder was one of the greatest excitement. The news flew, seemingly on the wind, to every portion of the county and the surrounding towns and cities. The County Court was sitting in Washington at the time, and Judge Atcheson, President Judge, in a speech in the court-room, urged the County Commissioners to offer a heavy reward for the apprehension of the dastards who had committed the fell deed. The Judge was followed by the Hon. William Montgomery, who spoke of the heinous crime as one unparalleled in this section, and urged the officers to quick action. I may here say that he little thought, at that time, that his own son would prove to be one of the men whose person he was so anxious to secure. But so it was. A thousand dollars reward for the capture of the perpetrators of the crime was offered by the Commissioners. The Sheriff was early upon the ground, and the place was literally sieged by throngs of curious visitors from the surrounding country. Every mark about the premises was minutely inspected, and the heel of a man's boot was picked up, and treasured by the officials until such times as the boot to which it belonged could be found. THE ARREST.

In the town of Washington the young man l'ogler resided. He hired out as a laborer, and among those who knew him was regarded as a assornte and desperate character. On 130 morning of the day on which the murder tock place, he was heard to remark that he had more desperate business on hand, and in company with young Montgomery had purchased some cartridges for a Colt's navy revolver. These facts, together with other circumstances, lead Sheriff Smith to make a search of Fogler's boarding-house. The search resulted in the finding of a heelless boot in the loft, which the heel picked up in the yard of Mr. Dinsmore fitted exactly. A pair of pants were also found, which were quite wet and muddy. Fegler was not in the house at the time, but was sitting at Montgomery's store, in company with young Montgomery and others, chatting about the murder, and speculating upon the chances of any one getting the reward. While jesting about his own ability to ferret out and arrest the guilty parties, the Sheriff walked in, and Fogler himself was taken into custody and conveyed immediately to

He was accused of the murder, but denied that he knew anything concerning it. He explained away the suspicious boot, etc., by stating that he had loaned them to a party who had just returned them. He was left alone for a time, and search was made for his accomplice. No one suspected young Montgomery, and it was not until later in the day, when Fogler made a confession, that the fact that Wm. Montgomery, Jr., was concerned in the bloody deed was believed or even suspected. Search was at once made for young Montgomery, and he was found at a village a few miles off, and taken into custody.

WHY THE MURDER WAS COMMITTED.

It appears that Mr. Dinsmore was a man who frequently had large sums of money about him, and a few weeks before the murder. had been in town endeavoring to procure change for a $1000 bill. This was known to both Fogler and Montgomery, and on the day of the murder they determined to rob him, and laid their plans for the successful accomplishment of the deed. They proceeded during the afternoon to a place near the scene of the murder, and there blacked their faces and awaited the coming of night. How they succeeded is already known to the reader.

THE TRIAL.

The trial of Fogler commenced on the 20th of February, and was concluded on the 23d. At the request of the District Attorney, the cases were tried separately. The following gentlemen appeared for the Commonwealth:— N. P. Fetterman, Esq., of Pittsburg, H. J. Vankirk, Esq., and District Attorney Boyd Crumrine, Esq. The following counsel appeared for the prisoner:—J. R. Ruth, Esq., and L. R. W. Little, Esq. The facts as I have stated substantially in the foregoing were proven, and the jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. Through the trial the court house was crowded to its greatest capacity with people, and the prisoner main-tained a stolid indifference throughout, and as the verdict was rendered by the jury he never moved a muscle, or displayed the slightest The trial of Montgomery commenced on the 25th ult. It excited the deepest interest, both on account of the extreme youth of the prisoner and the prominent position which his family has occupied in this district for the past twenty years. Throughout the trial the boy manifested the greatest concern, and was visibly affected as the details of the murder were gone over by the witnesses. The jury returned a verdict on Saturday of "not guilty.

WHO THE MURDERERS ARE. William Montgomery is a son of the Hon. William Montgomery, a lawyer of considerable ability, and a man well known throughout the State as a prominent Democratic politician. Mr. Montgomery represented the Twenty-fourth District for two terms in Congress, and since that time has been engaged n the practice of his profession. His son William, known among the boys of the neighborhood as "Babe," is a lad between fifteen and sixteen years of age, of fine manly ap-pearance, and quick understanding. He never had the reputation of being what may be called a really bad boy, until after his acquaintance with Fogler. Since that time he has been considerably troublesome, and strong efforts were made to break off the intimacy, which was formed while Fogler was employed as a laborer on his father's farm. From one rash step he gradually glided to another, until now we find him arraigned before a court of justice for the murder of one of his fellowbeings. The deepest gloom is east over the family of Mr. Montgomery by this most unfortunate event, and it is scarcely expected that the mother of the unfortunate boy will survive the event. Fogler is about twenty-three years of age. and is originally from this city, where his father still resides. He was brought up in ignorance, and at an early age was sent to the Penitentiary for some offense, where he remained until the breaking out of the war, when he was liberated on condition that he would enlist in the army. He served one term of enlistment, and upon his return hired at Montgomery's, and it was while here that he formed the acquaintance and influence over young Montgomery which has led to such unfortunate consequences. The day for the execution will be fixed by the Governor.

Mr. Doollitle said.—Mr. President—I find a report of a Committee of the last. House of Representatives, submitted by Mr. Hubbard, of New York, which demands a notice at my hands. It fills me with surprise and indignation. Without any notice to me, without calling upon me for any explanation, this report, by interence and not by direct charges, by intendo, not by positive averment, endeavors to create the impression that I received or agreed to receive $5000, or some pecuniary or other profit, from Mr. Smythe, the Collector of the Port of New York. This charge, whether made directly or by implication, whether sought to be sustained by proof or muendo, as absolutely and unqualifiedly false; and, from whatever source it comes, I pronounce it a base falsehood, a vile and cowardly siander, and I go further, sir, and say that in hundreds and perhaps thousands of cases in which during the ten years I have been in this body, my recommendation has been sought and obtained, there is not a single instance in which any kind of pecuniary consideration of the value of one cent was ever expected or received, directly or indirectly, by me. I have yet to see that man upon this earth who would dare to look me in the face and make me such an offer. Upon this and all other matters, I am ready to meet the most scarching scrutity. So much for my son has been called into question. Upon this subject, yesterday morning, I prepared a statement to submit to the Senate, but as I am told that the testimony is not all published, I shall therefore withhold it. Meantime, I will only say, when the truth isffully known there will be found nothing to reflect dishonor upon his character as a soldler or citizen. Continued from Third Edition.

It will now be issued, unaltered and unabridged, under the supervision of General Ender. It contains a full and official expose of the intricate machinations of the senet enemies of the Union.

For starting developments and thrilling adventures this book eclipses the lamous experiences of FOUCHE and VIDCCQ. The marvellous narratives of General Baker are all attested by the highest official authority. It will contain the only official history of the Assassination conspiracy. A full history of this great, startling, and terrible crime,
FROM ITS CONCEPTION. IN THE HAUNTS OF VILLANY TO THE BURIAL PLACE OF BOOTH. Has never yet been placed before the public. The work also fully exposes the nefarious system by which Presidential pardons were and are so readily obtained at Washington.

The morals of the National Capital are thoroughly ventilated, and there are some strange revelations concerning heads of departments, members of Congress, female pardon brokers, and distinguished military characters.
